

TINLEY JUDGE FINES ROBBINS COAL THIEF

The Robbins coal stealing case which has been in the court of Justice Paul H. Rauhoff for the past two weeks, came to a close Wednesday afternoon when Justice Rauhoff fined Lee Roy Turner of Robbins, $200 and costs on a disorderly conduct charge after Turner pled guilty to the charge of stealing coal from Rock Island freight trains.

According to the story told in court Turner in connection with a group of other colored youths would board freight trains at Blue Island, set the air brakes when the train neared Robbins and would then leave off many tons of coal. The coal thief gang was finally round up by Rock Island detectives. Turner, being the head of the gang was held after he confessed to the charges.

He seemed rather surprised when he was given the limit by Justice Rauhoff. Not having the money to pay his fine, he was remanded to the Cook County jail in Chicago for forty-two days.

Mokena Again Defeats Homer

Mokena again defeated Homer by a score of 3 to 1 last Sunday. Homer was the pill tosser for Mokena, dealing out only 3 little hits and 11 strike outs. Waldvogel tossed out 7 hits and 4 strike outs. Walsh and Bill both got a double apiece while Patty clouted out a triple. West also got a double. Hasibar was the first man up grounding out to Bennett. White was next popping up to Jimmy. West struck out.

No runs, no hits, no errors. Shorty was first up getting a hit. Jimmy sacrificed. Cappel grounded out to West. Bill struck out. Homer scored first in the 4th inning and were held there the rest of the game. Mokena scored one in the 5th and two in the 8th. The boys are creeping up on Homer but they still are one game ahead of them. Well so long till the frost bites.

Orland M. E. Picnic Is A Gay Event

The Sunday School picnic is still in vogue and useful, even if hard work. So say the committee which had charge of the Orland Park M. E. Sunday school picnic last Sunday.

Those on the committee were Mr. George Munch, Tom Cooper and John G. Loebe. And so say all the people who attended the joyful event. What an occasion of joy is such an outing to all! Everybody who can get out of doors at this time of the year likes to do so, especially the boys and girls. It is as much as one's life is worth to try to stem the crowd of boys and girls that hurtles forth on a picnic day and rushes, whooping down the green sloping hill side in the abandon of freedom. The Sunday School and church should be encouraged after last Sunday's good time to have some type of outdoor activity often.

The picnickers, with their basket lunch, went immediately from the church to the great temple of the Joe Creer Woods Room whose walls were the far flung horizon majestically decorated with great floating clouds, and shaded with spreading trees that cast their refreshing loveliness upon its carpet of green. Who could not enjoy dining in such surroundings?

After the repast, races and contests were the feature of attraction for the boys and girls. Many prizes were awarded the winners of the various contests. Horseshoe took the time of the men until the middle of

Steger Wins Water Fight at Orland Firemen Picnic

The fifth annual picnic of the Orland Park Volunteer Fire Department has come and gone and what a howling success it was! Rained out on Labor Day when it was scheduled to be held, the picnic was held last Sunday in the Forest Preserve on 143rd street. The weather man was on his good behavior and made to order weather prevailed. The picnic opened immediately after noon and drew a record breaking crowd.

There were races, contests and amusements of all kinds.

A water fight between the fire departments of Steger and Hazelcrest, resulted in victory for the Steger fire men. The water fight was a real peppy affair.

The combined bands of Oak Lawn, Orland Park and Midlothian furnished the musical program.

The refreshment stands did a rushing business.

The largest crowd was present in the evening when dancing on an open air dance floor was in order.

Fire departments from the surrounding towns were represented.

Even a fire department from an adjoining state was represented—Hammond, Indiana, whose fire chief was present.

The Orland Park Fire Department dispensed with their annual street parade of floats this year.

Chief John Helenhouse and his men deserve much credit for their excellent picnic and they in turn are appreciative to the public for their liberal patronage.

An Open Letter

Editor News-Bulletin:

I have been asked so often of late am I still a Democrat, that I thought it best to answer that question. Yes, I am still a Democrat, (very still) but when I say that I am a Democrat I don't mean that I am a Democrat-Republican, Socialist-Communist-Democrat. I stand by the platform of the 1932 convention. President Roosevelt started out fine, the manner in which he handled the banks was highly commendable and for this he deserves the thanks of the entire nation. In four months he did more good for our country than the previous administration did in their four years in office.

Now if Mr. Roosevelt had followed that up telling the manufacturer "open up your shop, set the workers to work and I will stand back of you", I believe today things would be running smoothly.

It is an unfortunate thing that he chose as his advisors those of a communistic leaning which has caused labor troubles. Paid Reds have entered labor unions, causing strikes, where there is no cause for strikes.

The Democratic platform calls for the government to keep out of private business, but platform and constitution alike, have been scrapped. Business has been disrupted by the so-called brain trust, until at the present time no one knows where we stand. And what can we do? No good turning to the Republican party for they are as bad as the Democratic party. My belief is that if Wadsworth, Al Smith and those who have organized to protect our constitution, will go still farther and make it a real political party, it will gather the Old Line Democrats and Republicans and the business men and laboring men who don't want dole, but do want honest labor. After the frightful affair in California it is time for Americans to awake to their responsibility. Let our first efforts be for America, party after.

Orland Heating Man Qualifies For Better Housing Program

Clarence E. Beagley, local plumbing and heating contractor of Orland Park, announced this week that he had qualified to do heating modernization work under the Federal Housing Administration and make all financing arrangements for the property owner.

Thru an agreement made with the Heating and Plumbing Finance Corporation of New York, he is now prepared, he says, to handle all the details of a loan to cover payment for the work. A home owner does not have to obtain a special loan from a bank or other institution to pay for modernizing his heating.

The financing terms are the same as those provided for all loans under the Government act, he explained. The home owner obtains an estimate of the work from the contractor and fills out a financial statement. When the work has been completed, the home owner will make regular payments to the Heating and Plumbing Finance Corporation.

Standard Government rates apply. These are the lowest in the history of time payments for the building industry.

No down payment is required. The home owner can have improvements made costing from one hundred to two thousand dollars, with as long as three years in which to pay.

"In making this arrangement," Mr. Beagley said, "we are seeking to offer the utmost cooperation to the Federal Government in the promotion of its home modernization campaign. It is our intention to simplify the details of financing modernization work in our field, so that no home owner need hesitate to undertake it."

Mrs. George Gee, Jr., who has faithfully served as director for the past eight years, asked that someone else take her place and suggested Royal Glahn who was unanimously accepted. While the choir is glad to have Mr. Glahn fill this vacancy, it is with a great deal of regret both on the part of the congregation and choir that they release Mrs. Gee from the directorship. She will of course continue to give her voice and the value of her experience to the choir.

The sixth annual picnic and homecoming for the old settlers of Aurora was held at Phillips park under the auspices of the Aurora Historical society, and brought together a number of men and women whose memories go back beyond the Civil war. The two oldest settlers are Bert Wilder, ninety-nine years old, who arrived in Aurora with his parents in a covered wagon 97 years ago, and Prescott McDole, ninety-six, a native of Sugar Grove. McDole's father worked as a surveyor for Abraham Lincoln at Salem.

Shot through the heart with both charges of a double-barreled shotgun, Charles Raymond Kimber, thirty-one, Germantown, Pa., former Philadelphia insurance executive, was found dead in Spring Valley at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kimber. The two triggers of the gun had been bound together and both barrels apparently fired at once by means of a wire manipulated by his foot. He had been ill a year.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HANDSOME, HAPPY CHICOREE

"DID you ever see a happier fellow than my cousin, Chicoree?" demanded Linnet the Purple Finch of Peter Rabbit, as they watched Chicoree coming toward them. "I'll venture to say that he has been having such a good time that he hasn't even thought of building a nest, and here half the people in the Old Orchard have grown families. I've got a nest and eggs myself, but that madcap is just roaming about having a good time. Isn't that so, Chicoree?"

"Isn't what so?" demanded Chicoree, perching very near to where Linnet was sitting.

"Isn't it true that you haven't even begun thinking about a nest?" demanded Linnet.

"Quite true, but what of it?" said Chicoree. "There's time enough to think about nest-building and household cares later. Meanwhile Mrs. Goldfinch and I are making the most of this beautiful season to roam about and have a good time. For one thing, we like thistledown to line our nests,

"Quite True, but What of It?" Said Chicoree.

and there isn't any thistledown yet. Then there is no sense in raising a family until there is plenty of the right kind of food, and you know we Goldfinches live mostly on seed. Just as soon as the children are big enough to hunt their own food they need seeds, so there is no sense in trying to raise a family until they can find plenty of seeds when needed. How do you like my summer suit, Peter?"

"It's beautiful," cried Peter. "That black cap certainly is very smart and becoming."

Chicoree cocked his head on one side the better to show off that black cap. The rest of his head and his whole body were bright yellow. His wings were black with two white bars on each. His tail also was black with some white on it. In size he was a trifle smaller than Linnet and altogether one of the smartest dressed of all the little people who wear feathers. It was a joy just to look at him. If Peter had known anything about canaries, which of course he didn't, because canaries are always kept in cages, he would have understood how Chicoree is often called the Wild Canary.

"I suppose," said Peter, "it sounds foolish of me to ask if you are a member of the same family as Linnet."

"Very foolish, Peter, very foolish," laughed Chicoree. "We belong to the same family, and a mighty fine family it is. Now I must go over to the Old Pasture to see how the thistles are coming on."

Away he flew, calling "Chic-o-ree, per-chic-o-ree, chic-o-ree!" As he flew he rose and fell in the air in much the same way Yellow-Wing the Flicker does.

UNUSUAL DISHES

WE ALL like to serve occasionally something a bit different and out of the ordinary, but for the daily diet the common foods simply served we enjoy the best.

Golden Coconut Shortcake.

Allow two slices of sponge cake for each serving. Prepare orange sauce by using one cupful of orange juice thickened with corn starch, adding a bit of sugar and butter. Cover each slice of the cake with the sauce in sandwich fashion, cover with thinly sliced oranges and top with freshly grated and sweetened coconut.

Stuffed Tomato Salad.

Scoop out the centers of six ripe even sized tomatoes. Chop the centers and add one cupful of cooked rice, one-half cupful of diced celery, four tablespoonfuls of cheese grated, one hard cooked egg, two tablespoonfuls of pimiento and one small onion, all minced; season with salt, a little lemon juice and any other desired seasoning. Fill the tomato cups and chill. Serve on lettuce with salad dressing.

Pot of Gold Dessert.

Mix one-half cupful of sugar with one-fourth cupful of cornstarch, add a bit of salt and a cupful of rich milk, one cupful of orange juice and when cooked until smooth and thick in a double boiler add two tablespoonfuls of butter and the well beaten yolks of two eggs. Let cook until smooth. Serve molded in individual molds, with whipped cream.

Maple Junket.

Dissolve one junket tablet in a tablespoonful of cold water, add to a pint of lukewarm milk, a little almond flavoring and a half cupful of maple syrup. Serve with the top of the sherbet glasses sprinkled with grated maple sugar or sprinkled with finely shredded almonds.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a friend of mine today I haven't seen in years. He told me his father died on the "scaffold." He didn't seem ashamed to tell me about it, that's what got my goat. Can you account for a fellow who will go around and say a thing like that about his father, without blushing?

Sincerely,
I. D. CLAIRE.

Answer: Because your friend told you his father died on the "scaffold" it doesn't necessarily mean he was hanged for murder. He might have been a bricklayer and, if so, probably fell.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am secretary of a little social club. We needed some money, so we decided to raffle off a piano. We had 2,000 tickets printed to sell at a dollar apiece. A day after they were all sold, our club rooms caught fire and the piano was burned to ashes. We are in a quandary what to do. What can you suggest?

Sincerely,
C. SHARP.

Answer: Very simple. Hold the raffle just as you had intended and instead of finding out who won the piano, you'll find out who lost the piano.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you believe in the old saying: "It's the deeds that count, not words?" Yours truly,

ROSIE CHEEKS.

Answer: Not when I'm sending a telegram.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have not been well and don't feel strong enough to work. In fact, I haven't worked a day in the past six months. Can you advise me what to do that will make it possible for me to work?

Sincerely,
M. PLOYMENT.

Answer: Ginger ale is very good for your strength, but you must take it right away. Go to any drug store and take six bottles of ginger ale, run out of the place without paying for them and let a policeman catch you. When the policeman tells the judge that you took six bottles of ginger ale without paying for them, I guarantee that you will work hard, very hard, for the next six months.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Sometimes I Wake—

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SOMETIMES I wake and tremble in the dark, Thinking of you, across the miles of night.

Your lamp of life burns with a feeble spark.

I do not know when on a winged flight

You will be through with living's sweet delight.

But this I know: when in the distant blue,

Your soul shines out, a new and lovely star,

On such a night as this my thoughts

Will come and linger near you where you are.

The light of your pure spirit will reach far,

Just as it finds me now, to lay a hand

Upon my consciousness with you apart;

Speaking of love while midnight angels stand—

Dark sentinels who, with their woe-ful art,

Lay bands of black foreboding on my heart.

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols

Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

MOST beginners in upland wing shooting make the mistake of trying to use a gun too heavy for their strength. Shooting quail, woodcock, grouse, pheasant and rabbit calls for fast snappy action. The game bursts from cover, usually at the most unexpected moment. When this happens in dense cover, as it most frequently does, one must be able to snap his gun into position instantly and shoot in a flash.

If your gun weighs too much for your arms you simply cannot do effective work. The over-weight in your heavy gun not only tires you out before the day's hunt is done, but it gives you an ever-present sense of uneasiness. You lack composure. You lose that confidence that is so necessary to good shooting—the feeling that you can hit anything that gets up in front of you. Down in your lower nerve centers always lurks the fear that you will not be able to swing your gun into action fast enough.

The result of such fear is usually a hurried, uncertain shot. Time and again you shoot and miss. Yet you do not understand why you miss. You may have shot over, and under, or wobbled right or left. But until you learn to call your shots, to know why you are missing, you can never progress very rapidly towards becoming a crack wing shot.

The good shot is practically never in doubt about a miss. He knows where he shoots. When he makes a mistake it is frequently because he misjudged the rise of the bird and consequently under-shot. Or he fails to take into account the bird's speed in a sudden swerve to right or left and shoots behind his target. It is little errors like these that first led gun makers to add a second barrel, or a magazine with extra shells, to their guns.

Using a gun that is too heavy is one of the chief reasons why the poor field shot continues being a poor shot—indeed, definitely. Point your finger at any object and you not only point with accuracy, but with effortless ease. Nature beautifully proportioned your hands and arms to the weight of your body. But suppose your pointing hand suddenly had five pounds of dead weight added to it. Your pointing would not be near as quick or as accurate. The same thing is true of your gun. If you want to hit what you shoot at, with reasonable regularity, see that your gun weight is proportioned to your weight.

The average upland gunner has no business with a gun that weighs more than about 6½ pounds. Yet remember also, that the weight of your gun should be proportioned to the charge it shoots. A 6½ pound 12 gauge gun is just a trifle too light to shoot heavy loads. Especially for the beginner. It kicks like samhill and before you know it you may acquire that worst of all shooters' curses—the flinching habit.

The 16 gauge is an admirable gun for upland work. But best of all, especially for the beginner, is the 20 gauge. It is a powerful and deadly gun. Shooting the ounce loads it has 80 per cent of the maximum killing range of the 12 gauge. Rating the dead certain killing range of the 12 gauge at 50 yards—and this is all you can expect of it, claims to the contrary notwithstanding—the 16 gauge has a range of 45 yards, and the 20 will kill with absolute certainty at 40 yards. So what's the sense of toting a 7½ to 8 pound 12 gauge in the field for a mere 10 yards extra range? Especially since the lighter weight 20 can be brought into action quicker and thus reduce its handicap over the larger gun. And especially, too, since more than 90 per cent of all upland game is killed within 30 yards.

Cut down your gun-pounds and you will find you have more comfort—and you will get more game.

After all, the shot gun is distinctly a short-range weapon that calls for fast, snappy action in handling it. Try a 6 to 6½ pound 20 gauge. See how quickly it will help you gain confidence in your ability to use it. See how quickly your shooting improves.

Life Is Saved by Poison

Given to Combat Poison

Found unconscious after taking 225 grains of poison (four and one-half times the average fatal dose), a young woman in London was saved recently by injections of another poison totaling six grains (twelve times the average fatal dose), according to the British Medical Journal, official publication of the British Medical society.

The account is given as an example of the new use of strychnine in massive dosage as an antidote for poisoning from hypnotic drugs of the veronal group. The injections of strychnine were given the woman for an hour or so, and the six grains would have caused violent convulsions in a normal individual. Although she remained in a state of coma for sixty hours, it is stated, a complete recovery was made.

New Photo-Sculpture Process

Japan has a new and remarkable photo-sculpture process. The latter is required to spend only a few seconds in the chair, during which time 456 "vertical contour" photographs of his head are made. The process produces bronze busts in any size with startling photographic accuracy.—Freling Foster in Collier's Weekly.

HOUSING ADMINISTRATION TELLS HOW TO SECURE REPAIR LOANS

A Statement in Which Every Reader Who Wishes to Improve or Remodel His Property Will Be Interested.

Washington.—The Federal Housing Administration is engaged in an elaborate promotion campaign for the remodeling and repair of homes and business property. It is urging the public to make repairs or to do such remodeling of homes as would make them more livable, and advising the people that the national housing act has made it possible to finance through banks or other financial institutions many such repairs or remodelings that would not otherwise be possible. As a means of explaining the operations of this act the Housing Administration has issued the following statement:

1. You may have certain property improvements already in mind—the small investments that pay large dividends in better living. Perhaps it's light switches, paint, plumbing, plaster, or a complete remodeling job. In addition to the items you may have planned already, check your property against the list of repairs, alterations and improvements suggested in this booklet.

2. Decide what improvements you can afford to make now—or at least the improvements you cannot afford to neglect any longer.

3. Call a contractor, or—if it's an important job—an architect. Or get in touch with your local better housing committee if there is one in your community. Any of these individuals or agencies co-operating with the Federal Housing Administration will gladly estimate the cost.

4. Then comes the question: How shall I pay for these improvements? If you have the cash—cash is the ideal way to pay.

But if you should find it more convenient to pay out of your regular income—the investment is a sound one, and now is the prudent time to go ahead. The better housing program has oiled the machinery of credit so that you may pay easily and conveniently for property improvements made at once.

Your contractor or supply dealer is in a position to co-operate.

Or you may arrange directly for a low-cost, long-payment loan with your own local bank, building and loan association or other financial institution co-operating with the government.

The way has been smoothed—the future of your property is up to you.

Here's What You May Be Asking

1. Who may apply? Any property owner, individual, partnership or corporation, with a regular income from salary, commissions, business or other assured source. It is not necessary to be a depositor in the financial institution consulted.

2. To whom do I apply? To any national bank, state bank or trust company, savings bank, industrial bank, building and loan association or finance company approved by the Federal Housing Administration; or to a contractor or building supply dealer.

3. Do I borrow money from the government? No.

4. How much may I apply for? From $100 to $2,000 depending on your income, for improvements on any one property. A like amount in connection with not more than five properties ($2,000 maximum on each). Approval by the Federal Housing Administration, Washington, D. C., must be secured by the lender in advance for loans on more than five properties.

5. How long may notes run? For any number of months from one to three years. (Notes extending from 37 months to five years may be submitted to the Federal Housing Administration by financial institutions for special consideration.)

6. What security is required? Only that you have an adequate regular income and a good credit record in your community.

7. What assurance need I give?

(a) That you own the property. (Lessees under "repairing leases" may qualify under special circumstances which the local lending institutions can explain.)

(b) That the annual income of the signers of the note is at least five times the annual payments on the note.

(c) That your mortgage, if any, is in good standing, and that there are no past due taxes, interest or liens against your property.

(d) That you will use the proceeds solely for property improvement.

8. What signatures are required? Signature of the property owner; and (except in special cases) if the owner is an individual and is married, also signature of wife or husband. No other co-signers or endorsers are required.

9. What is the cost of this credit? The financial institution may not collect as interest and/or discount and/or fee of any kind, a total charge in excess of an amount equivalent to $5 per $100 of the original face amount of a one year note, deductible in advance.

For example: If you need $285 for housing improvements, you might sign a note for $300 payable in 12 equal monthly installments. In this case the note would not bear interest, because the maximum charge permitted ($15) would be included in the face of the note.

If you borrow a large amount, or if you repay in equal monthly installments extending beyond one year—from 13 months to 3 years—the total charge permitted would be at a proportionate rate.

10. Do I pay any other charge? No.

11. How does this cost compare? Compared with ordinary 60 or 90 day bank loans, it is higher. Compared with the same type of loans payable in monthly installments, it is much lower than heretofore available. The reduced cost is made possible because of the government credit insurance to the financial institution.

This type of loan makes it possible for you to spread the payments over a long period. You do not have to keep money on deposit with the institution making the loan. You do not have to give a mortgage. You need not have friends or others sign your note, and you reap the benefits of the improvements now.

12. How do I pay the note? By making regular, equal, monthly payments (seasonal payments for farmers and others with seasonal income) until the note is paid in full.

13. May the owner of any kind of property apply? Applications will be considered for credit to improve one-family, two-family, or other residences; apartment buildings, stores, office buildings, factories, warehouses, farm buildings.

14. Must I use specified building material? No, you are investing your own money (even though borrowed) in better housing. There will be no restrictions on your rights as an owner to use such materials and employ such methods of construction as you may decide—provided they meet the approval of the lending agency.

15. May I borrow to buy housing equipment? Yes, if the equipment is an integral part of the improved building. Furniture, refrigerators, stoves, etc., are movables (unless built in) and are not permitted under terms of your loan.

16. Where do I make payments? The regular installment payments will be made in person at the place of business of the financial institution; or by mail; or as otherwise arranged. No payment shall be made to any governmental office or organization.

17. May I pay the note in full before maturity date? Yes, at any time. A reasonable rebate will be allowed for prepayment, if charges have been collected in advance.

18. May I pay more than one installment at a time? Yes, as many as you wish, but such payments should be in exact multiples of the agreed payments—that is, if monthly payment is $10, advance payments should total $20, $30, etc.—not, for example, odd sums such as $18 or $25.

19. What if I am late in making my payments? The maker must not permit his payments to fall in arrears. Should a payment be more than 15 days late, the financial institution's expense, caused thereby, may be reimbursed in part at the rate of not more than five cents per dollar for each payment in arrears. Persistent delinquency will make it necessary for the financial institution to take proper steps to effect collection in full.

Note: If you are not eligible for a loan under the terms of the national housing act, you may be eligible for a conditioning loan from the Home Owners' Loan corporation, which has recently established a reconditioning division. Any one of the banks in your community will advise you where to make your application.

HERE'S HOW TO SAFEGUARD YOUR INVESTMENT

Your own judgment will tell you that you must invest wisely and thoughtfully—if you would reap the maximum in benefits from property improvements. Here are a few points to remember:

1. Select good workmen. You should personally know the contractor or workman who will handle your job or, if not, check his reputation for responsibility and skill. Probably the only effective safeguard as to price is the securing of competitive bids.

You should not pay for the work or sign a note covering the cost of the work without receiving a written guarantee.

2. Recondition—in its best sense. No item of repair, alteration or improvement should be an attempt to conceal building defects which are more fundamental. If the work involves a large expenditure or major changes in a building—that is, if it involves alterations and new construction rather than mere repairs, it is wise to consult an architect or engineer. Your saving will be much greater than his fee, which may be included in the loan.

3. Consider the neighborhood and the character of the property to be improved. Costs and benefits should be weighed against the building's future and its surroundings. If your application is rejected because of unfavorable neighborhood conditions, you may still become eligible for a loan by enlisting a substantial group of neighbors in a general neighborhood improvement plan.

4. Increase the value of your property by as much—or more than—the cost of the work.

NRA ALIGNS TRADE INTO 22 CLASSES

Efficiency and Economy Aims of Change.

Washington.—The NRA took its first long stride toward obtaining what is termed a more efficient and economical code administration by dividing American industry into 22 classes in a complete realignment of code groupings.

The plan was recommended by a specially created economic unit and corresponds closely to the groupings of the census bureau and of the international classification. At the same time, NRA disclosed that the eventual expectation is that the 22 sections will fit into ten or eleven industry divisions.

In a lengthy outline of the new development the NRA said the classification was based on recognition of four basic groups of enterprise:

1. Production of basic materials from the soil.

2. Fabrication of what emerges from the first group into finished products.

3. Service—Industries which do not produce or fabricate definite products but which render service—ranging from all transportation through finance to amusement, professions and such service trades as laundries, restaurants, etc.

4. Distribution of goods, wholesale and retail.

The 22 sections and the fundamental groups to which they belong are:

Producing Industries: Food, textiles, leather and fur, ferrous metals, non-ferrous metals, non-metallic products, fuel, lumber, chemicals, paints and drugs, paper, rubber.

Fabricating Industries: Equipment, manufacturing, graphic arts, construction.

Service Industries: Public utilities, transportation, communication, finance, amusements.

Distributing Trades: Professions and service, wholesale and retail trades.

Ends Life by Stings of Swarm of Hornets

Tampa, Fla.—The stings of scores of hornets killed Ramon Perez, thirty-four, unemployed Tampa cigarmaker, who leaped nude into a colony of the insects with the avowed intention of killing himself.

Perez died after suffering agonizing pain from the stings. He was in the swarm of hornets for about ten minutes. He went from his home to an adjoining vacant lot, removed his clothing and sat down in the midst of the insects.

While some one called the fire department, Perez' mother rushed to the aid of her son. He refused to heed her appeal to flee. Finally, after firemen had begun burning weeds in order to smoke out the hornets, she dragged him from the lot.

Perez refused medical treatment, telling hospital attendants he had plunged into the hornets' nest purposely and wanted to die.

Famous Mosque of St. Sophia Periled

Istanbul, Turkey.—The world-famed mosque of St. Sophia was badly shaken and nearly collapsed as a result of wrecking operations at the adjoining law courts.

The supporting columns of two high walls which workmen were tearing down suddenly gave way and a great mass of stone toppled toward the mosque.

State Police Hunt Gang That Stole 40 U. S. Guns

Lansing, Mich.—State police were engaged in an intensive search for thieves who stole 40 automatic pistols from the National Guard armory at Grandledge. Authorities expressed belief that the thieves expected to find $800 in payroll money in the armory.

Girl With Gun Gets $72 in Office Holdup

Norfolk, Va.—A woman giving the name of Vera Maxwell, twenty-four, was arrested here 15 minutes after a lone woman bandit had helped up a Western Union Telegraph office and taken $72 at the point of a pistol. The police said she admitted the holdup after they had found the money and a revolver in her handbag.

Two Medicine Vendors Slain in Mountains

Clinton, Tenn.—A double slaying was revealed here with the discovery of the bodies of T. A. Lytle and J. M. Gordy, itinerant patent medicine salesmen of Knoxville, in the mountain fastness of the New River section of Anderson county. Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the killing.

Lily Damita to Wed Millionaire

London, England.—Lily Damita, motion picture actress, admitted she plans to marry youthful Hugo Brasse, an English millionaire, but said "our engagement is still unofficial."

Kills Self After Siege

Murray, Neb.—After standing off county and state officers during a three-hour siege of his farm home near here, Ernest Millburn, thirty-eight, shot and killed himself.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—The political situation waxes warmer. It is seldom in our history where the records disclose so much heat in the campaign fights as has already been developed. It may die down some, but the wisecracks in politics are predicting red hot battles over the issues and mud slinging and muck raking among individuals.

There is the speech by Secretary Morgenthau of the treasury, an attempt to show that the New Deal has not been so costly as critics of the administration claim; there is the victory of the Socialist, Upton Sinclair, who captured the Democratic nomination for governor of California, and there is a growing list of social reform proposals among administration advisers which provide meat and drink for the politicians on the opposing team. There is the accomplished fact in this connection of the pension legislation which the railroads claim is going to cost them almost one hundred million dollars a year.

One can mention also the row among cabinet and emergency officials over the future course of NRA and the test that is being made in the District of Columbia courts to determine whether a business firm can be made to comply with a code which it has definitely and continuously refused to sign. There is the speakership fight among the Democrats of the house of representatives, and the bitter attacks that are being leveled at the treasury by some of the senators and representatives from agricultural areas on account of administration management of processing taxes. Efforts of the American Liberty league for protection of constitutional rights are being expanded. All the while New Deal planners are engaged in development of new schemes such as a program designed to result in federal ownership of the railroads.

To say that the situation is confusing is to use the mildest sort of language. Observers in Washington who have watched political maneuvers for a quarter of a century and more insist that at no time in their recollection have they seen anything similar to present conditions. Take the Upton Sinclair victory itself, as an example. I am told that few times in modern politics has it occurred that a man so long affiliated with another partisan group has bored his way in and seized titular control of a major political party. The observers insist that the result of the California primaries has placed the Roosevelt administration on a decidedly hot spot unless, as it has been charged, President Roosevelt is willing to commit the Democratic party which he heads to the Socialist doctrines publicized for a quarter of a century by Mr. Sinclair.

Some political leaders here are whispering that the Sinclair victory will strengthen the hand of the American Liberty league and enable the sponsors—Al Smith, Jouett Shouse, John W. Davis, former Senator Wadsworth and others—to go about the country and obtain recruits for their defense of constitutional rights. Active efforts of this kind, of course, are likely to catalog the league as definitely anti-administration, but league leaders apparently do not entertain such a fear at this time.

The processing tax question is another that political observers insist is due to cause trouble for the President.

Processing Troubles

They point out that heretofore such criticisms as have come of the processing taxes have centered on Secretary Wallace and the Agricultural Adjustment administration. Now, however, the attacks are being leveled at the bureau of internal revenue, which is a part of the treasury and, therefore, the fire has swerved from one department to the other. It is to be remembered that both Secretary Morgenthau and Commissioner Helvering of the bureau of internal revenue are personal appointments of the President. Republican campaigners are using this as a vehicle to carry their assault on the President himself.

Whatever the political implications may be, it remains a fact that such New Deal supporters as Senator James P. Pope of Idaho have taken Mr. Helvering to task for his administration of the processing taxes. Senator Pope has written to Mr. Helvering with particular respect to the processing tax on hogs, which he charged was being collected from farmers who slaughtered and sold pork produced on their own farms. The Idaho senator forced a bill through congress in the closing days of the last session which he believed would free the farmer of this tax and provide a refund of tax which he claimed was illegally collected. At this writing, Senator Pope reports, the bureau of internal revenue has not even drafted the forms upon which farmers may make application for refund of taxes already paid, and it amounts to approximately two and one-half cents per pound. It takes no stretch of the imagination to figure how much tax has been taken from farmers in this way.

There are other complaints about the processing taxes as well. These include a complaint that has become country wide among users of products as well as the producers of products that compete with coconut oil. It will be recalled that there was something of a battle in congress when an import tax was laid on coconut oil. The industry felt it had gained a great victory. Developments since have shown just how wrong individuals can be.

Republican wheel-horses claim they now have ammunition in the shape of Mr. Morgenthau's speech on the cost of the New Deal, for which they long have awaited. The treasury secretary spoke over the radio. His purpose obviously was to get as wide distribution as possible for his conclusions that the New Deal thus far has cost only $505,000,000, despite the fact that the treasury daily statements show an addition of approximately eight billion to the national debt. The secretary was able to show, in his way of thinking, that while the public debt has been increased by the amount stated, nearly all of these funds eventually will come back into the government's money chest. He admitted, however, that there may be losses sustained by some of the emergency agencies and that these losses naturally will affect the total as he had calculated it.

Morgenthau Under Fire

I talked with a Democratic senator concerning Mr. Morgenthau's speech and he told me of his intention later to make a similar speech on the subject. He was somewhat disturbed, however, as to how he could explain the receipt by the treasury of $2,800,000,000, which is the amount of profit gained by the government as a result of devaluation of the dollar to the point where it is worth only 50c in gold. He appeared to be afraid that opposing campaigners were going to say that the federal government had no way of obtaining revenue or money of any kind other than by taxation and borrowing. He suggested that the profit of devaluation could hardly be described as money borrowed, nor could it properly be called receipts from taxation.

The Republicans are using Mr. Morgenthau's own figures in an argument that the assets of wholly government owned agencies such as the Reconstruction Finance corporation are so far only bookkeeping items. It appears to be irrefutable that no one can foretell what the value of these assets are going to be one, two or three years hence. Therefore, without discussing the merits of the argument on either side, it can be said definitely that the Republicans will be doing a lot of figuring just as Mr. Morgenthau did figuring to reach the conclusions he wanted to reach and disseminate among the voters.

In some quarters I hear expressions of commendation for the pronouncements by Mr. Morgenthau. Strangely, these commendations do not relate to the total which he contended the New Deal had cost thus far, but to the fact that the administration was going to remain faithful to its pledge that the deficit would not exceed eight billion dollars in the period covered. Washington has received numerous reactions from business interests regarding this particular phase of the Morgenthau speech, and business seems to regard that much of it as reassuring.

As regards the controversy that is raging in the administration itself, observers believe there is every reason to expect an eventual explosion. General Johnson, the NRA administrator, on the one hand, and Miss Perkins, the secretary of labor, and Donald Richberg, secretary of the President's executive council, on the other, are all individuals of the temperamental makeup required as requisite to a real battle. Their differences grow out of the plans as to the future of the NRA, which, the President has said, is to continue as a permanent part of the New Deal structure. Washington has not quite made up its mind concerning the delimitations laid down by the two factions, but it is apparent even now that Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg contend for expansion of the NRA control beyond the limits to which the bombastic General Johnson is willing to go. Also, it is made to appear that Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg prefer to see NRA under the domination of an individual whose mental slants are in line with their own, which is to say, in the opinion of most observers, that they favor a radical tendency beyond General Johnson's program. The general, having been a business executive, seems to realize that it is better to proceed cautiously in expanding NRA supervision, and is holding out for that course.

The differences between these individuals are the first to reach proportions requiring White House intervention. Whether Mr. Roosevelt has salvaged the feelings of each is not completely established, although it seems now that General Johnson will continue to manage NRA and that Miss Perkins will, in effect, be sent back to her Department of Labor to give her attention to that job. Nevertheless, there is a growing belief here that this controversy is not dead but sleeping.

BELL'S PART IN HUMAN HISTORY

In All Ages Has Had Power to Stir the Heart.

It is strange to think of the large part bells have played, and still play, in life. Birth, death, peace, war, marriage, victory—all are announced by the voice of the bell, even in these days of telephones and wireless. From ancient times man has used a bell to express the sentiments of his own soul, and its voice still has the power to stir the heart.

Church bells were probably introduced into the Christian church about 400 A. D. by Paulinus, bishop of Nola. But bells were certainly used before that time, because the Romans announced death by ringing them, and they have been familiar to the Chinese and Hindus for countless ages.

Small gold and silver bells were probably first used to scare away evil spirits who might attack the animals to spite their masters. The old Passing Bell was rung for the dying, to scare away demons who were waiting to pounce upon the soul when it left the body, and the same bell was sounded to disperse storms and pestilence and to quench fire. Even in 1852 the bishop of Malta ordered the church bells to ring an hour to lay a violent storm at sea.

Small gold and silver bells were presented to the winners of horse races up to the time of Charles II. Many English taverns were called "The Bell" in allusion to this custom, for the bell was, in other words, the prize. And the prize bell, given to the horse, must have been a relic of the belief that it would protect the animal.

Bells have been almost universally used to proclaim war as well as victory. When the tocsin was rung in France in 1914 it stirred the souls of the people as no telegram stuck in a postoffice window ever could do. There were thousands of people who never had heard the alarming voice of the war bell, but they recognized it immediately and required no further call. The sound of the tocsin had hardly faded away before a stream of men, horses and carts set out from the distant farms for the nearest village, bringing with them what they could in response to that call.

No sound is more terrible than the alarming, warning cry of the tocsin, and those who have once heard it can only hope devoutly never to hear it again.

Pump and Shovel

Two Symbols of a By-gone day!

Automatic gas heat, like the automatic water supply, now replaces inefficient, laborious, old-fashioned methods

KITCHEN toil—long hours in a poorly equipped, hot room has been banished forever by the forward march of progress. The wood-burning stove, the basement cooler, the pump at the sink have passed. In their stead have come the automatic range, the modern refrigerator and the sanitary plumbing system. Pump and shovel—these symbols of a bygone day—are no longer to be found in the truly modern home. The shovel—symbol of hours of furnace worries and basement drudgery—has been displaced by a little thermostat on the wall—the only thing you need to regulate the temperature of your home when you have gas heat.

Heating with gas is the modern way to end back-breaking shoveling, hauling of ashes, dust, soot, and dirt. Gas heat is automatic. Gas heat is clean. And it is so easy. No running up and down basement stairs at all hours to tend furnace. You fire your furnace from your favorite easy chair. No grime to cover curtains and walls. No dirty smudge to make woodwork harder to clean. In this modern day the shovel—like the old-fashioned kitchen pump—has no place in your home now that gas heat rates are so low. Get the facts at once.

So that you may know the genuine pleasures of gas heat, we make this liberal offer. We'll install gas heat at our expense, remove it at our expense, if you don't like it. You do not invest one cent for equipment. We will install a burner in your present furnace or boiler at our expense. While you are trying it you pay only a small rental during the heating months—only $3 a month for the burner in the average home. This charge is included with the bill for the gas you use. You try it for one month, two months or a year. If within a year you decide to return to your old heating methods, we will replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. But if you decide to keep gas heat, the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment.

Modern Gas Fuel Tireless Worker At World's Fair

YOU INVEST NOTHING To Try Gas Heat!

Gas heat can be installed without your investing one cent for equipment. To prove that every home can now afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense—remove it at our expense, if you don't like it. Accept this startling offer. Phone your nearest gas office TODAY.

Gas, the modern fuel, literally plays hundreds of roles in making a success of the 1934 Century of Progress exposition.

It provides the exactly uniform heat needed in the baby incubators. . . it simulates the steaming springs of Hot Springs National Park. . . fires the boilers and forge furnaces in the huge Ford Motor Company and Chrysler exhibits. . . makes the water comfortable for exhibition swimmers. . . and melts the glass with which the Venetian glass-blowers work their wonders.

It aids in the manufacture of radio tubes in the vulcanizing of tires, in the making of pottery and porcelain, and in the baking of bread. It cools meals for fair visitors in more than 250 restaurants and food stands. It provides space heating and air conditioning.

On every hand at this most modern of world's fairs—the 1934 Century of Progress—the most modern and cheapest of fuels is at work.

NEW DEAL NOTES

The Literary Digest poll, which showed that President Roosevelt had picked up strength all over the country, was also interesting because of its expression of opinion from the various professional men and women. In the national poll the business men, clergymen, educators, lawyers, doctors, college students, and other groups were all for Roosevelt. Only the bankers voted against him. They, as a matter of fact, should have been stronger for him than any of the other groups, because it was his handling of the banking situation which restored confidence to the country and has made their banks sound today. Would the bankers care to go back to the condition existing in March, 1933, when every bank in the land was closed?

Farm sentiment nowadays may be judged by a banner carried by a farmer from Livingston County on his car the day of the Democratic roundup in Springfield. The banner read: "1932 corn 12 cents. 1934 corn 60 cents. What a change!" Just an increase of 500%, that's all.

One of the most popular acts of the Democratic State Administration under the leadership of Governor Henry Horner, was the elimination of the State tax levy. This year, for the first time in over a hundred years, Illinois is collecting no direct State property tax. It is the greatest single taxing relief that the taxpayers ever experienced in a single year.

A Qualified Man
John Stelle, Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, is generally admitted to be one of the best qualified men ever to seek that office. He was assistant state treasurer for two years, assistant state auditor for two more, and has practical working experience and knowledge of every department of the State government. In addition he is a practical business man himself, having successfully conducted a large manufacturing company for many years.

Where is that grass growing in the streets of cities with which Hoover threatened us in 1932, if Roosevelt were elected?

Bruce Campbell, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, said in a recent speech: "Republican propagandists are talking about the loss of individual liberties under the Roosevelt Administration. We admit that some people have lost some individual liberty. For one example: the southern cotton mill owner has lost the individual liberty to work nine year old children ten hours a day."

and Mrs. Bert Matteson Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. McDonald and children have moved back to Chicago for the winter months.

Mr. Otto Niedringhaus has returned to camp after spending the week end at his home.

The Church In Economics

By Rev. John Mullen, Pastor
Orland Park M. E. Church

In view of Jesus' attitude toward the economic questions of his day, as given in the Gospels, should the church content itself with a program merely of worship? Why?

No.

Why? First, for a selfish reason: The church needs to concern itself with the economic needs of society, from a selfish standpoint because it cannot hope to lift individuals, on Sunday, to high ideals when they are surrounded by injustice in their work-a-day life. Many of the poor and common people followed Jesus because of the hope of a better chance. This, I believe, is commendable. It is obvious that Jesus realized the necessity of lifting people out of the humdrum of life before he could lift their souls to God. When Jesus was encountered by a man with a withered hand or a man whose boy was sick with fever, he did not invite the man or the father to church—he removed their handicaps. I do not doubt but that they were in attendance the following Sabbath, however. And they brought something with them that would enrich the service—the very thing we need today.

In the light of the teachings of Jesus and his sympathetic sensitiveness to human need, whether it be personal or otherwise, the church cannot afford to concern itself primarily with the heavenly kingdom beyond. If I understand Jesus correctly, our task is to build here and now a kingdom of God on earth. The first service of any new church in a community should be one of inspiration; the second service, not one of smug safety within cloistered walls, but one where people sing because work has been done, work which fulfilled the previous inspiration. Our fine programs of worship, our chants and ritual will avail us very little if we are negligent toward the thing that life needs now, and that will be always a living, changing succession of needs. It is well for any congregation to be filled with a general discontent which will never be satisfied until justice and equality are established. The only basis on which the church can maintain, or has any right to maintain, its place in the world, must be a principle of guiding. That, it appears to me, is its primary task rather than one of doctrine.

Our failure to do this was con-

Think of Our Schools

John A. Wieland, Democratic candidate for Superintendent of Schools, says in his speeches, "We have a new deal in the national administration and the state administration and it's done us good. There's another place we need a new deal. That's in the school system of Illinois. We need some progressive ideas in that department and some real understanding of school problems, and I intend to give the State of Illinois a new deal in education."

Everybody, including some Republican candidates for office, is trying to jump aboard the Roosevelt bandwagon. The slogan seems to be, "Ride with Roosevelt."

Expenditures of the State government have been cut more than a million dollars a month by Governor Horner. In the year and a half of his administration more than $18,000,000 has been saved to the taxpayers by economical conduct of the offices under his control. Yet there has been no loss in efficiency. The service of the State government has improved despite the fact that it is operating with much less help.

Michael L. Igoe, candidate for congressman-at-large, laughs at the reactionaries' bugaboo of dictatorship. "If dictatorship means keeping people from starving; clothing them; giving babies medical attention; making work for some 7,000,000 citizens; improving business conditions; seeing to it that men in industry are given a fair deal; all this being done by the act of congress of the United States, then I'm for that kind of a dictatorship."

Why He's Loyal
The East Saint Louis Journal the other day had an article about how ex-President Hoover saved $100,000 for Henry Fletcher, new chairman of the Republican party. Mr. Hoover wanted Mr. Fletcher to become chairman of the tariff commission. In order for him to accept it was necessary for him to sell certain securities he held. He sold his securities and accepted. This was in 1930 and four months later the decline in the stock market had continued to such an extent that Mr. Fletcher was $160,000 richer than if he had kept them. It's no wonder that Mr. Fletcher is still loyal to the GOP.

Martin A. Brennan, candidate for congressman-at-large, says in his speeches: "If the Democratic administration had done nothing else than to abolish child labor, it would go down in history as a remarkable administration. Almost overnight President Roosevelt and his followers took the little children out of the factories, mines and sweatshops."

Our country is well on the road to recovery. Help Roosevelt finish the job.

cretely illustrated very recently when a neighboring minister refused to take part in a community project for good, on the basis that it was not a matter of doctrine. Not all of our doctrines can be proved one way or the other by scripture, but we do know what the Bible states directly concerning the Golden Rule.

We might say that the church should stick to her business of saving souls, and that if we save the individual, social and business relations will be Christian. But an individual Christian does guarantee Christianized economic and political conditions. Further, it would be easier to reach individuals if social relations were not so unchristian. Christianity has proved that it can save individuals; it will prove equally powerful in society.

Scripture teaches something besides doctrine. It says if you have two shirts—share; whoever has food—do likewise, tax gatherers were never to exact more than their fixed rate. Jesus looked forward to a fellowship of men in which love and righteousness should rule. His kingdom is not national, but broadly human. The bitterness, the mutual suspicion between the classes which prevents all plans for real cooperation, they are all here and it must be part our task to tear them out the nation's heart. The recalling of the American commercial attaches, on six day's notice, was not only bad business, but decidedly unchristian. We cannot hope to construct anything on the basis of our present ethics.

We must go on the assumption that all men are of equal VALUE in the sight of God; all men are not equal in ABILITY, but these extra talents are to serve and to bring to a fuller and more worthy life, those less talented—whose truth is taught on Sunday and to be carried out on Monday—else why preach again next Sunday? Even if the church is not highly organized for investigating and correcting social evils, the weakness of God is stronger than the strength of others. Shall we honor the working man in theory (on Sunday) and avoid him in practice (on Monday)? All theories of the redemption of politics and industry from the sordid are equally futile which do not include, and eagerly depend upon, a strenuous effort to redeem man from sin. Just so long as human nature holds greed and envy, so long will our finest dreams be shattered. Since the roots of our inequalities lie in human nature, it follows that human nature (the affair of the church) is that which must be changed—not a Law. The church is not willing to abandon earth as a bad job, simply preparing souls for heaven.

Nothing reveals more fully the Christianity which we profess than the hope which it holds out to men, who toil beneath heavy burdens of work, greed, power and ostentation, that a better day of righteousness may and will be ushered in when those who should care supremely give themselves to reform in every good cause, social, economic, and moral, whether it be national or international.

The Preacher's Pad and Pencil

ERNEST L. SNOGRASS
THE MARLEY CHURCH

MAKING THE MOST OF LIFE

Religion exists as the effort which people make to be redeemed—not only for life after death but also for every-day living here and now. This life need not be a continual "vale of tears"; it is possible to make it good and meaningful.

As far back as our knowledge of human life goes, there is evidence of this quest—for this desire for life's values. Much has been accomplished. And today, wherever men and women hold an idea of what is right and good in life, and try to achieve it, there is religion.

Clearly, not all religions are alike, just as all cooking is not alike. They differ in ideas and in method.

But most of us can share in the quest of religion together. We know something about this serious business of living; that love is better than hate; that kindness is better than being grouchy and cruel; that honesty is better than lying; that standards of decency are better than filth and shame. We can be loyal to this best that we know.

We are pretty well agreed also on what must be opposed if we are to gain in our quest for the good life. At least if we should think about it honestly we could recognize the evils. Evil is anything that belittles, degrades, or wastes human life. A plant that cannot get water and sunshine is wasted; whatever keeps the water and sun away is evil to that plant. And a human life that is kept from developing a well-rounded personality and a rich or abundant life is similarly wasted. All people in their religion desire to oppose that which belittles, degrades, or wastes their lives and to cultivate "whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report."

To this goal of religious living we need to bring all possible resources: our work, scientific understanding, worship, government, education, and art. But first we must bring ourselves; we must say, "In my own little life, and by cooperation with others, I will strive to defeat all that belittles, degrades, or wastes human life."

Mayan Carved Altars
Masterpieces of Art

Two great carved altars, masterpieces of prehistoric American art, have been discovered at the ruins of Quirigua, Guatemala, by Earl H. Morris, archeologist of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The stone altars date back to a very early period of Mayan history. On each altar block an unknown Indian Phidias sculptured the large form of a human being in distorted posture, elaborately clad and wearing a large and complicated head-dress with face mask. The remaining surface of the slab was used to record a long and delicately wrought inscription in Mayan hieroglyphs, with serpent motifs around the margin. Both altars are very large, one being 11 feet by 12½ and almost two feet thick.

The backwash of the Montagua river, nearby, had deposited thick mud over the lower portions of the city ruins, covering the altars and preserving them from centuries of weathering—Science Service of the New York World-Telegram.

He was leaning forward now, searching the girl's face with boring eyes to catch the faintest change, the slightest flicker of betrayal.

"I did not, señor," she said. "H'm," said El Diablo savagely, "and when you so quickly stooped and picked from the floor that small brass can which Senor Parks dropped from his pocket, you still did not know what you were finding?"

"No," said Sonya, "and would not now if Manuel there had not told the Senora about it—called it a five-tael can of 'black molasses.'"

Manuel leaped from his seat, talking swiftly, facing his master. And somewhere behind her a woman stifled a scream. But Diablo was on his feet, his fist on the table.

"So!" he thundered, "my people talk behind me, do they? They mention that which is never to be mentioned? I shall deal with you—and you, senora—later. Now bring me Quince."

At that Sonya felt the world go round for one terrible second. She clutched the chair back tightly.

And from somewhere at the right there came the sound of marching feet, the swift step of men obeying a master. Through the dappled shade cast by the poplar trees five figures moved into her line of vision, four who walked abreast in twos and in their midst a fifth—Starr Stone as she had seen him last, in cowboy boots and dungarees belted at his lean hips, a faded denim shirt. He had no hat, and his bronze head shone in the light like gold, and he had not shaved for days.

He was haggard and his eyes were large in his tanned face, and his arms were bound behind him. He was a prisoner with all a prisoner's indignities heaped upon him, but his tall form was erect, his blue eyes dark with the spreading pupils. He strode toward the table with his gaze set on Diablo's face and saw no other in the silent mass.

"Senor," he said. "Senor," said El Capitan, and the smile was gone from his face. It was black with rising fury.

"For five years, Quince, you have been with me—my best and ablest man. You have done my bidding quickly. You have led my raids. You have put my merchandise—safely through its secret ways. I have called and you have come, always. Always until lately. Lately you have come on laggard feet. You have held back at my orders. You have disobeyed me. And I have now the reason. That reason is a woman. A woman whom you have set before El Capitan Diablo. Whose word has been more to you than my word. Who, through your instruction doubtless, has come upon the key of my activities. Who has caught Quatro with the goods in his own store. Who holds Diablo and all his future in the hollow of her hand. Or would so hold him had it not been for Quatro's swift action in the matter. Senor—behold the woman!"

He had half risen again, leaning with one broad hand on the table. With the other he pointed dramatically to Sonya. And like a flash Starr Stone whirled and saw her.

It was the first inkling he had had that she was not safe in her own country, about her own pursuits, and the shock of it drained his face to a ghastly pallor.

"Sonya!" his lips formed soundlessly.

"Yes," said the girl defiantly, "they took me from my horse two nights ago—kidnaped me—by airplane—and brought me here because I stumbled on the fact that Parks is their agent in the smuggling of narcotics across the line. They think you told me—that you and I have planned to double-cross this wicked bandit here—this beast who says I'm lying!"

She waved a hand at El Capitan, nodded her black head toward him. "Ah! A beast, am I? El Capitan Diablo a beast?"

"Yes, señor—and worse," said Sonya Savarin. "You may kill me—as I do not doubt you will—but I am an American, and I do not bend to you, either in body or soul. We are both Americans."

"Oh, Americans! And Americans do not double-cross?"

"No, señor."

"Well, we shall see. Quince—attention. What do you say for yourself?"

The tall man standing in the mottled shade looked long in his master's face. What years of wrongdoing, of obedience, of fear, were in that look only they two might say. For a long time it held between the wild blue eyes, the deadly black ones.

Then Starr Stone turned to Sonya. "Sonya," he said distinctly, "once I told you that a leopard could not change his spots. A little later I told you that my inner self had changed, that all my desires, my outlook on life, had changed with knowing you."

I longed to prove it to you. You said you wanted no proof. The time has come to give it to you. There is nothing left for me to want on this round earth but your faith in me. I told you once that I have been a man of violence. I have been, God forgive me, and what had happened. The events of the last tragic days stood sharply out before her.

"A misstep in my early youth—it doesn't matter now what it was—put me in the power of El Capitan Diablo. For my freedom's sake I cast in my lot with him. For my life's sake I could never leave him afterward. I have raided, burned, and pillaged, but I have never killed a man nor harmed a woman or a child. I have been his brains in smuggling, his ablest lieutenant, as he says. But now I'm through."

"With death as my sure reward for what I'm saying, I say here and now, before these witnesses, that I am done forever. Done with all wrong and all evil. That the leopard changes his spots at last. For the love of you in my soul I am made over new. They will kill me soon, and I hope they'll send you with me with all my heart—though hell itself can hold no torture for me to compare with the knowledge that I have brought you to this. That will be more punishment than my lost soul can bear. Oh, Sonya, forgive me for what I've done to you."

"Forgive you?" panted the girl, half sobbing. "Forgive you? I glory in you! And we'll go together, never fear! If not one way, then another. It will not be a long good-by, I promise you."

"Soul's covenant," said Starr Stone. "Soul's covenant," she answered.

But here El Capitan leaped to his booted feet, his fist on the table again.

"It will not?" he rasped. "You think it will not? Carramba! El Capitan Diablo has yet the final word. You to the winds and the vultures, Quince, and may you remember many things in the—the interval."

"You," he turned to Sonya and leveled a finger at her, "I give to that one among my men who rises to this Quince's empty place. Manuel, my compliments, the lady. I believe you like a white-skinned woman with curls in the hair. And after you—the rest. And that, as they say across the Border, is that. Take them both away."

The four men moved to surround their prisoner, the marching feet passed swiftly, and Sonya watched the tall bronze head go out of the shade into the sun—around a corner.

The world and all it held turned dark before her just as the senora reached out a motherly arm.

She dimly heard Manuel saying, "Careful, senora, careful—she is mine."

CHAPTER XIII

Love's Sacrifice.

When she opened her eyes again it was dusk in the deep-walled room, and she lay on the ancient bed. For a while she lay in a sort of stupid peace, gathering her faculties, which seemed to have been scattered to the four winds.

And then suddenly the values of life dropped into their appointed places, like the brilliant colors in a kaleidoscope, and she knew where she was and what had happened.

El Capitan had spoken, and she was still a prisoner, the property of a dapper Mexican bandit with predatory eyes and laughing, thin lips, Manuel the aviator. And Starr Stone was gone—oh, heaven! Gone to that ghastly fate which lurked in the poignant words, "you to the winds and the vultures." The wild blue eyes that had darkened and changed under the mandates of life, the long hands with their tender touch, the lips so warm upon her own!

Sonya leaped to her feet and paced the old room like a tigress caged, striking her hands together, her soul dying within her. The young lieutenant had said, "Careful—she is mine," and he stood next to the master now. His word was law beneath that other's, and no one would disobey.

And presently the senora came padding softly to the door on heavy feet, for she was old and excellently fed, and entered to her kindly ministrations.

Sonya whirled and faced her, her dark eyes burning in the shadows.

"Senora," she said desperately, "Have pity on me! Can you not help me? A knife, senora—with my next meal—left on the tray? In the name of that holy Woman whom you worship, please, senora!"

"I cannot, child," she answered gently. "Manuel would kill me. Come, let me wash your sweet white body with fresh water. And there is perfume, and a woman's clothes to dress you in—a scarlet dress, and golden shoes for your feet. To night you rest—Manuel's orders—but tomorrow you wear these things for him. You must forget."

Forget! Forget—the vultures and the wind! Forget the stars, the soft winds blowing, the creak of leather, and Starr Stone's hand on hers laid on her pomel! She turned from the old woman and began again her interminable walk, the striking of her hands together which somehow seemed to hold her brain from snapping, to keep her searching for a way to end it all. She would not let the senora wash her, nor accept the silken bed gown which she now produced. She shook her head, pushed her away.

"If you have within you, senora," she said piteously, "any remnant of a woman's pity for another woman lost to all the light of life, leave me to fight it out alone. Leave me now."

For a long time the other stood and watched her, calculating, then nodded and turned away.

"I have not forgotten—for thirty years," she said cryptically. "You shall have your night, querida."

But she stopped with her hand on the great iron latch and surveyed the room completely for any sharp thing, any pointed thing, any place where one might tie a rope—of bedclothes, say. Finding none of these, she opened the door and went silently away.

The sound of the bolt falling echoed in the empty passage.

So. This was the end. Not forever could they keep her in this barren room. Sooner or later she would have the means. She only prayed it might be soon—before she must wear the scarlet dress for Manuel. There must be something hidden somewhere with which one could slash a vein in so slight a thing as a woman's wrist.

The bed, perhaps, A spring under the huge tick filled with feathers, maybe. But the bed was old when the land was new, and it was laced with rawhide so steel-like, hard, and dry that it had outlasted centuries.

It was as hopeless as the great bars in the window set in the ancient mud of the walls.

And Sonya Savarin, who had guarded life so well, now stood at bay, holding her breath, pondering desperately how she might destroy it.

If only she had her bags! Her little case of instruments! But she had nothing—and Starr Stone was dying now, perhaps, or would tomorrow.

There was nothing left to do, no foes to face with lifted head, no schemes of hope to make, no one whom she might coax to help her.

And so at last Sonya, having exhausted all her resources, scant at best in this terrible situation, made ready to bow in resignation. She knelt by the ancient bed, which had no doubt seen tragedies before, and folding her hands addressed her soul to its Maker in sorrow and humility.

How long she knelt she never afterward could recall. Sometimes she prayed, weeping, for that other soul which had so grievously mispent its days, and these were fervent prayers, abased and agonized before the heavenly throne, begging for that mercy of the eleventh hour which has been divinely promised; sometimes for Serge and Lila and little Babs, even for Darkness. For herself she asked scant favor. It had been always so with her. Service to her fellow men, comfort for all suffering things, had been her passionate aim in life.

Of herself she thought last and least, of Starr Stone most.

It only they had met in those early days of which he spoke, before that one misstep had put him in El Diablo's power, made him an outlaw, a Border renegade. When the sweetness, the kindness in him had been paramount. Before sin and wrong had put the leopard spots upon him.

But the spots were changed at last when it was too late. To his face he had repudiated El Capitan, signed his own death warrant, for anyone leaving the dark service of this monstrous bandit put himself "on the spot" as truly as any in more modern places.

And he had done it deliberately, to prove to her that he was changed, even to the death. The courage which had shone in his face in that repudiation had been magnificent. He knew, none better, the fate of El Diablo's double-crossers, and he double-crossed him high-handedly and with supreme finality.

"Oh, Starr!" wept Sonya with her forehead on her clasped hands. "Oh, my man of all men! My one and only love!"

In the warm dark silence the heart in her seemed to melt in anguish, the tides of life to run swiftly out.

For her it was the ebb of finite things, the last low hour before the end. In a dull coma of hopelessness, her face swollen with weeping, she sank lower and lower against the great bed, her lips apart, her black head disheveled.

And into this last deep abyss there dropped a tiny sound.

So low and soft it was that Sonya was not conscious of it until it had repeated itself several times—the almost inaudible scrape of metal against metal.

The outside bolt, huge and heavy, slipping slowly in its slot!

With her breath caught in her throat Sonya Savarin listened.

After a tense interval it came again, and the gentle creaking of the great door on its hinges.

Instinctively the girl shrank back against the bed.

Manuel! Manuel, her master!

She stifled a scream on her open mouth, her hand across it.

And then a voice, whispering into the darkness, a breath of a voice as lovely as music, said "Senorita!"

She could not speak, and again it whispered, "Senorita?"

"Si," said Sonya, gasping, "I am here."

There was the murmur of a moving form, and Concha knelt carefully beside her. Sonya reached out and touched her incredibly, but the girl drew sharply from the contact.

"Attend," she said, "if you are brave—are you so, senorita?"

"I am very brave," said Sonya simply.

"Then listen. You I hate from my soul's bottom—I could strike you now with my two hands—but there is another, whom I love. Oh, Mary Mother! Love!" she said as if to her inward self. She stopped a moment then went on.

"If you can follow me without a sound there is—a hope. Can you walk so?"

ISAIAH CONTRASTS FALSE AND TRUE WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 1:1-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. Psalm 24:3, 4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling God We're Sorry.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When God's People Sin.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is True Worship?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature of True Worship.

Isaiah's visions present the redemptive purpose of God through the consummation of the Messianic kingdom. The first verse is the title. The book contains prophetic utterances of earlier and later dates. Chapter 1, from which our lesson is taken, contains the divine arraignment of the people for their sins.

I. The Moral State of the People (vv. 2-4).

1. Filial ingratitude (v. 2). The universe is summoned to hear the Lord's complaint against Judah and Israel for their base ingratitude and even rebellion. In spite of God's care, even as of a father for his children, they persisted in sin and in violation of their covenant with God.

2. Brutal stupidity (v. 3). The ox and the ass are proverbially stupid, but Israel's stupidity exceeded theirs. Israel would not recognize God as her rightful sovereign or acknowledge him as the author of her mercies.

3. Habitual evil-doers (v. 4). They were not sinners in outward act merely, but in nature and heart were laden with iniquity. By heredity they passed their vices from generation to generation.

II. Their Consequent Miseries (vv. 5-9).

1. Their perplexity (v. 5). The hand of chastisement had been laid upon them; but this failed to do them good. Their afflictions were followed by deeper and more heinous sins.

2. Their awful confusion (v. 6). The calamity which befell them extended to all classes.

3. The desolation of their country (vv. 7, 8). Revolts from within and invasions from without left their country desolate. Physical ruin always follows moral and spiritual decadence.

4. Assurance to a remnant (v. 9). God's purposes cannot fail. A remnant was saved in Israel. This is strikingly set forth in the ninth chapter of Romans.

III. Formal Worship Rebuked (vv. 10-15).

Notwithstanding the calamities visited upon them, they did not neglect the observance of religious rites and ceremonies. They punctiliously observed the forms of religion while indulging in iniquitous practices.

1. God does not derive benefit from religious sacrifices (v. 11). Our worship and service are not for God's profit, but for that of ourselves.

2. God's attitude toward formal worship (vv. 12-14). The very rites and ceremonies which God ordained for the purpose of helping men to approach him become disgusting and irksome to him when formally indulged.

3. God's refusal (v. 15). Every act of worship while the heart and life are steeped with iniquity only incites the divine anger.

IV. An Amended Life God's Requirement (vv. 16-20).

Though the nation had so grievously sinned, their case was not hopeless. However, in order to enjoy his mercy there must be:

1. A cleansing (v. 16). "Wash you, make you clean." The washing by water symbolized the cleansing by the blood of the Son of God.

2. "Put away the evil of your doings" (v. 16).

3. "Cease to do evil" (v. 16). Genuine repentance causes one to desist from the practice of sin.

4. "Learn to do well" (v. 17). One can only cease to do evil by learning to do well.

5. "Seek judgment" (v. 17). Burdens should be removed from the oppressed, justice should be meted out to the fatherless, and the widows should be befriended.

6. Encouragement to come to God (v. 18). Though their guilt was great and the judgment which befell them was awful, God's pardoning and cleansing grace was sufficient.

V. A Promise and a Warning (vv. 19, 20).

1. The promise (v. 19). They were to eat the good of the land on the condition of a surrendered will and an obedient life—God's terms.

2. A solemn warning (v. 20). Refusal to hear God's appeal and rebellion against God's demands would result in being devoured with the sword.

Prayer

And what God can do, prayer can do; for prayer binds God, because it is the prayer of faith; and faith, as it were, overcomes God. Now prayer is the flame of faith, the vent (outcome or utterance) of faith; and faith is a victorious triumphant grace with God himself.—Richd. Sibbes.

The Christian Doer

"You can write down, first of all, impossible; then difficult; then, if you are a Christian, done."—J. Hudson Taylor.

Scraps of Humor

BELIEVE IT, OR NOT

A dear old lady was shocked at the lurid language of two electricians who were working in her house, and complained to the company. In due course the two men were sent for and asked for an explanation.

"Well, sir," said one, "it was like this. I was up the ladder and I let the hot lead fall on Bill. It went down his neck. And Bill, he said to me, 'You really will have to be more careful, Jack.'"

Dining to Discord

"Society," said Miss Cayenne, "reminds me of a minstrel show."

"Where they say 'Gentlemen, be seated?'"

"Yes. Only they say, 'Ladies, be seated.' And then the 'music' starts!"

Contract Casualty

Two men were getting ready for a dip in a swimming pool.

"Your shins are in pretty bad shape," remarked one. "Hockey player?"

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I just led back my wife's weak suit."

Immune to 'Em Now

"Your daughter is very modern, isn't she?" remarked the visitor.

"Yes," sighed the mother; "I have reached the point now where I doubt if I could even be shocked by a live wire, no matter what the voltage was."

Doubtful

Film Star (newly married)—And is this your home?

Bridegroom—It is, precious.

"Say, it looks mighty familiar. Are you sure I haven't married you before?"—London Tit-Bits.

Another Side

"That fellow is highly educated. He must be smart."

"Oh, he may be," responded the man in the street. "But he worries over things that I never heard of."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NO HURRY

"I could teach you to swim in three lessons."

"But I don't want to learn that fast. We're going to be here for a couple of months."

Hopeless Case

Blinks—I hear Jim's gone plumb goofy.

Jinks—Yes, the poor chap's mind has become as unbalanced as the national budget.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Maybe So

Fred—Mother, was there hair-oil in this old bottle?

Mother—Why no. That was glue. Fred—Maybe that's why I can't get my hat off.

Tears Not in Order

"My husband has run off with another woman. Oh, I just can't control myself!"

"You mustn't try, dearie. You'll feel better after a good laugh."

Sarcastic

"I try to be always in accord with nature."

"So I observe. When nature doffs her garb in the fall, you begin to put more on."—Boston Transcript.

Sonny's Error

Plumber—I've come to fix the old tub in the kitchen.

Son—Mamma, here's the doctor to see the cook.

For Morning or Afternoon Wear

Pattern 1795

Here's the latest in feminine chic for morning or afternoon wear. Ruffles to accent the smart line of the yoke are irresistibly flattering, and the sleeves have puffed-up charm. A white yoke to top a sprightly silk or cotton print would be ever so lovely. The cost of pattern and fabric is so nominal that you could make this frock without imposing on your budget. A perfect model, too, for the beginner because of its utter simplicity—the front and back are without waistline seams and the yoke is just no trouble at all to set in place. The sleeves may be omitted.

Pattern 1795 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 3 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric and five-eighths yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York.

SCORE ONE FOR HUBBY

Young Wife (looking in the window of a jeweler's)—George I'd love that bracelet.

The Husband—I can't afford to buy it for you, dear.

"But if you could, you would, wouldn't you?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Why?"

"It isn't good enough, dear."

FRANKFORT-NEW LENOX 4-H
The monthly meeting of the Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H Club was held August 28th in the home of Robert Mast.

A demonstration which was to be shown by Fred Francis on how to wash live stock, had to be postponed due to the unfavorable weather. In place of this demonstration he recorded the benefits of the Springfield fair.

Several boys of this club exhibited stock at the Peotone fair. These boys fared well in the various kinds of live stock.

Wilbert Lauffer, Reporter

Mokena has enjoyed a reminder of the old days of activity the past week when a big gang of men was engaged in raising the main line tracks of the Rock Island 2 inches. Tom Carey with his team did some plowing work along the right of way.
